FOREWORD

As Editors of this publication, we continue to try to provide to both prelaw advisors and prelaw students the most current and useful information possible. In the spring of this year we conducted our annual survey of ABA accredited law schools in the United States in order to update these lists of law school academic programs, clinical programs, available scholarships, admission policies and other information. Two notes, both caveats, should be added here. First, this is really a reference book, a ready reference, we hope. Individual schools should be contacted for more information. Second, both advisors and students should be cautious when selecting a law school on the basis of one or just a few factors such as specialized programs, joint-degree programs, salary ranges, student organizations, etc. For the most part, a legal education is a general education in law and specialization occurs after law school. Applicants should look at the total program presented by a law school and see which school in its totality seems to best meet their needs.

We hope that users of this book will also recognize that these lists are compiled from information received from law schools and that they are, to coin a phrase, “subject to change without notice.”

A very special thank you is owed to Terry Wilkerson who supervised this project this year. This book could not have been completed without her efforts. The editors are greatly appreciative of her abilities and grace throughout this project.

Please note that NAPLA and SAPLA do not endorse, support or acknowledge the effectiveness or utility of any commercial test preparation or advising program.

LAW SCHOOL ACADEMIC PROGRAMS

Some law schools offer graduate work in a general field of law while others have graduate programs in a specific area of the law. A number of law schools have joint degree programs whereby a student may combine his/her legal studies with course work in another discipline. In these cases some of the credits from the law courses will count toward the graduate degree in the other discipline while some of the graduate work will fulfill a part of the law degree. When these programs are available the individual will generally be able to complete the two degrees in a year less than if they were taken separately. A large number of law schools give special emphasis to certain areas of the law but not enough work to warrant a graduate program.

The information on the following pages has been compiled over time and is updated annually from the responses to a questionnaire submitted to the law schools by Dean Edward Stern of Boston University and Dr. Gerald Wilson of Duke University. Again thanks are due to Ms. Rita Callahan Ralston, who shepherded this year's project from beginning to end.

Many schools change their programs from one year to another. After finding the special program in which a student is interested, attention should be given to the website and/or the most recent bulletin of that school. Several schools have indicated that a student might be able to work out another joint degree program on an individual basis.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, when there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the ABA · LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools rather than from a response to the Wilson/Stern Survey.

Second, when two asterisks () appear beside a school, the entry applies to graduates of foreign law schools only.

C. (i) Law Schools Offering an Accelerated JD/MBA Program or Other Accelerated Program

American University	Dual degree programs, including JD/MA in International Affairs, JD/MPA in Law and Public Administration, JD/MPP in Law and Public Policy, and JD/MS in Justice, Law and Society, take 3.5 to 4 years to complete as a full-time student.
University of Arkansas—Little Rock
Baylor University	Students can complete the joint JD/MBA in three years.
University of California—Los Angeles
Chapman University	Yes, our joint JD/MBA program can be accelerated by taking classes over the summer.
Charleston School of Law	Students may complete a JD/MBA dual degree in 3.5 years.
University of Chicago	Students may complete a JD/MBA joint degree program in 4 years.
Chicago—Kent College of Law	Yes, the accelerated program takes 4 years to complete.
University of Colorado	Students may complete a JD/MBA dual degree program in 4 years.
Columbia University	Columbia Law offers a 3-year JD/MBA program.
Cornell University	Yes, we offer a 3-year JD/MBA dual degree program.
University of Dayton	Yes, we offer a 2-year JD.
Drake University	Yes, we offer a 3-year JD/MBA dual degree program.
Duke University	Yes, with careful selection of courses, JD/MBA dual degree students can complete the requirements in seven semesters rather than eight.
Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University	We offer a 2 year JD.
Florida Coastal School of Law	Florida Coastal School of Law, in collaboration with Jacksonville University, offers a joint JD/MBA which can be completed in three years.
University of Georgia	Students may complete a JD/MBA, JD/MHP in Historic Preservation, JD/MPA in Public Administration, JD/MEd in Sports Studies, or JD/MSW in Social Work in four years.
Georgetown University Law Center	The JD/MBA, JD/MPP, and JD/School of Foreign Service programs provide for accelerated achievement of two degrees in four years instead of the five normally required to complete the degrees separately. JD/Government and JD/Philosophy degrees are also accelerated, with completion depending on whether a student is full-time or part-time and is a Masters or Doctoral candidate. Georgetown also offers three JD/LLM joint degree programs: in International Business & Economic Law, Securities & Financial Regulation, and Taxation. Students who participate in one of these programs and take the requisite number of qualifying courses during their JD studies will be able to complete an LLM degree in only one additional semester.

Golden Gate University	Joint JD/MBA program may be completed in 3–4 years.
Hamline University School of Law	Students may complete a JD/MBA dual degree program in 4 years.
Maurice A. Deane School of Law—Hofstra University	Students may complete a JD/MBA dual degree program in 4 years.
University of Houston Law Center	Yes, the full-time JD/MBA degree can be completed in 4 years, and the part-time JD/MBA program can be completed in 5 years.
University of Kansas	Yes, if a student begins in the summer start program and takes courses year-round, they could finish a JD/MBA on an accelerated basis.
Loyola Law School—Los Angeles	Accelerated JD/Tax LLM 3-year joint degree program that includes an intensive summer session of tax law courses.
Loyola University—Chicago	The program takes four years to complete.
University of Memphis	Students may complete a JD/MBA, JD/MA (Political Science) and JD/MA (Public Health) in 4 years.
Mercer University	Mercer University School of Law offers a joint JD/MBA program that may be completed in three years.
University of Miami	Miami Law offers a Triple Degree Program : A Specialized Option for Business Majors. The program enables students with undergraduate degrees in business to obtain three degrees in four years—a J.D., an M.B.A, and an L.L.M.
University of Michigan	Yes, interested students can accelerate the typically eight-semester program by matriculating through Michigan’s summer start.
University of Missouri—Columbia	Yes, students are able to complete the JD/MBA program in 4 years.
University of Nevada, Las Vegas—William S. Boyd School of Law
University of New Hampshire School of Law	4 yr JD/MBA program
Northeastern University School of Law	We offer a 3-year JD/MELP program in collaboration with Vermont Law School.
Northwestern University	We offer a 3-year JD/MBA program.
University of Notre Dame Law School	Yes, the accelerated program takes 4 years to complete.
Nova Southeastern University	We offer a JD/MBA dual-degree program, but students must complete the requirements of the program within 3 years.
University of Pennsylvania	We offer numerous 3-year programs: JD/MBA, JD/MA or MS in Criminology, JD/MSEd in Education Policy or Higher Education, JD/MES in Environmental Studies, JD/MBE in Bioethics, JD/MS in Social Policy, JD/LLM with the University of Hong Kong, JD-MPA in Government, JD-MA in Global Business, and JD-MSW in Social Work (with a BSW)
Quinnipiac University	Yes, the JD/MBA can be completed in less than 4 years.
Regent University School of Law	2-year JD see www.regent.edu/accjd

University of Richmond	Students may complete a JD/MBA dual degree program in 4 years.
Saint Louis University School of Law	Saint Louis University School of Law offers a dual JD/MBA that is accelerated by taking classes over the summer thereby complete both degrees in 3.5 years.
Santa Clara University	Yes, our JD/MBA can be completed in 3.5–4 years.
Seattle University School of Law	JD-MBA in 4 years.
University of South Dakota	Offers nine dual degree programs in conjunction with the Graduate School that can be completed in three years.
South Texas College of Law	South Texas College of Law, in collaboration with Mays Business School at Texas A&M University, offers a JD/MBA cooperative program for full-time students which can be completed in 4 years.
Southern Methodist University	Yes, the full-time JD/MBA joint degree can be completed in 4 years, and the part-time JD/MBA joint degree can be completed in 5 years.
SUNY Buffalo Law School	Students may complete a JD/MBA dual degree program in 4 years.
Suffolk University Law School	Suffolk offers a three-year JD/MBA.
Temple University Beasley School of Law	Yes, students can complete the JD/MBA program in 3 years provided they take a class in the MBA program the summer before their first year of law school.
Tulane University	Yes, students can complete the full-time JD/MBA joint degree in 4 years.
Valparaiso University	We have an accelerated 2.5 year JD. Dual degree programs are typically 4 years total, but can be completed in 3 years depending on scheduling.
Villanova University	Yes, 3 years for both.
Washburn University School of Law	The JD/MBA traditionally is completed in four years; however, it can be completed in three years by taking courses during the summer.
University of Washington	Yes, our joint JD/MBA program can be completed in 4 years.
Washington University
Western New England College School of Law	Our dual degree programs are designed to be completed in 4 years, but students have been able to complete the JD/MBA in less time.
Willamette University	Yes, the dual degree JD/MBA can be completed in 4 years.
University of Wyoming	Yes, we offer a JD-MBA that incorporates an 18-month, accelerated MBA program. The degree can be completed in 3.5–4 years.
Yale Law School	Yes, we have a 3-year accelerated, integrated JD/MBA with Yale's SOM.

D. AREAS OF EMPHASIS WITHOUT A GRADUATE DEGREE

Advisors and students should note that the primary function of law school curriculum is to offer a general education in law. In most cases, specialization in one area of the law comes with on the job experience after law school. Caution should be exercised in using this list of “Areas of Emphasis” as the primary factor in choosing a law school. Students should also be aware of the possibility that too narrow specialization may limit job opportunities.

CLINICAL PROGRAMS

This section of the Book of Law School Lists attempts to give a listing of areas in which clinical programs are offered. Given the great variety of clinical programs and the even greater variety of titles given to these programs, we believe that it is more useful to simply identify areas. Often these clinical programs assume the form of internships or externships. Specific details about each program can be found in individual law school bulletins or in the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools.

Two notes may be helpful to the reader:

First, where there is an asterisk (*) beside a school, the information came from the ABA-LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools rather than from a response to the Wilson/Stern survey.

Second, the list concludes with a category simply called “Various.” Resisting the temptation to label it “Miscellaneous,” the editors listed schools which indicate that they have clinical programs but did not offer specific information. In many of these cases, clinical programs are arranged individually according to the needs of the student and the opportunities available. Students and advisors should examine information provided individually by these schools.

Pro Bono Work Requirement/Public Service Requirement

Appalachian School of Law: The Externship requirement (three credit hours) allows students to apply the skills learned in the core curriculum. Students typically take this course during the summer following their first year of studies at the Law School. Students work for a total of approximately 225 unpaid hours in a judges' chambers, public law office, or public interest organization under the direct supervision of a licensed attorney.

Boston University School of Law encourages students to join the Pro Bono Program, which gives students the opportunity to dedicate their developing legal skills to unmet legal needs in the Boston area, throughout the United States and around the world. Through the Pro Bono Program, J.D. students provide 35 hours of law-related service during their three years at BU Law (LL.M. students provide 12 hours) to organizations dedicated to underrepresented groups and or social issues. Upon completion, students receive a notation on their law school transcripts confirming participation in the program.

University of California—Davis

The Pro Bono Program is a certificate program designed to enhance our student's educational process. Pro bono work is volunteer legal work performed without compensation or academic credit and under the supervision of an attorney. Students can volunteer in public interest organizations, government agencies or courts.

Participation in the program also provides students recognition for their community service; upon completion of 50 or more hours of pro bono work, students receive a Pro Bono Program certificate.

Public Service Law Program

The Public Service Law Program is an academic certification program developed for students seeking public service careers. Students are eligible to enroll at any time throughout law school but are encouraged to enroll in their first year. Certificate requirements include academic and experiential components. To receive a certificate, students must fulfill the academic and experiential components of the Program.

University of California-Irvine

The University of California, Irvine School of Law is deeply committed to the performance of public service work. We expect that our students and faculty will be regularly engaged in public service work throughout their careers.

Public service work, of course, can take many forms and reflect many values, including activities such as helping those who cannot afford legal services and working for public interest and government organizations. We encourage our students and faculty to set yearly public service goals similar to those expected of practicing attorneys.

Catholic University of America

The Columbus School of Law encourages students to engage in pro bono work through the the CUA Law Pro Bono Challenge. CSL students pledge to complete 2550, or 75+ hours of pro bono service during their law school tenure and are recognized accordingly at an annual reception and upon graduation.

Charleston School of Law

Regardless of a student's path after graduation, part of the Charleston School of Law's mission is to instill in students the value of public service. Students at the Charleston School of Law are required to perform 30 hours of free legal work in the public interest under the supervision of a licensed attorney before graduation. The school also requires its faculty to provide 30 hours of pro bono work every three years.

University of Colorado

University of Colorado encourages pro bono activities by a voluntary Public Service Pledge program. Students who complete 50 hours of law-related public service work in law school will be recognized at graduation and work will be reflected on transcript.

Columbia University: Every candidate for a J.D. degree must devote 40 hours to public interest field work between the start of the second year of law school and the end of the third year as a prerequisite for graduation. Work will qualify if it is uncompensated (financially or by academic credit), public interest or public service law-related work, broadly defined and regardless of political orientation.

Cornell University

The Public Interest Law Union and the Office of Public Service can help you start building your commitment to pro bono service during law school. The purpose of the Public Service Challenge is to provide school-wide recognition of Cornell Law Students who devote time to public service activities. Students who participate in the Public Service Challenge will receive a Certificate from Dean Stewart Schwab upon each level of completion.

University of Denver

Public Interest

50 hours during law school tenure

University of District of Columbia School of Law

Through Duke University's Pro Bono Project, students provide volunteer legal services in individual areas of interest. While not required, participation is strongly encouraged.

Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University: Every student must complete at least 50 hours of pro bono service prior to graduation. Students who provide 75+ hours of pro bono service receive recognition at graduation.

Florida State does have a pro bono requirement. Students must fulfill 20 hours of pro bono/public service work during the second or third year of law school.

Georgetown University Law Center encourages students to participate in pro bono activities through the Pro Bono Challenge. Students who perform at least 75 hours of law-related pro bono work during their years at Georgetown are recognized at Graduation.

Georgia State University To encourage and support students who provide pro bono services to the community, the College of Law has adopted the Georgia State University College of Law Pro Bono Recognition Program. Pro bono activities include not only those that ensure adequate legal services for moderate and low income individuals but efforts that enhance the capacity of law and legal institutions to do justice, and activities in the local community that promote justice. The College of Law's pro bono recognition program is designed to encourage students to engage in such activities while in law school and thus conduct themselves in accordance with highest values and standards of the legal profession.

Hamline University School of Law has a pro bono service requirement of 24 hours over the course of law school.

The University of Hawaii | William S. Richardson School of Law has a pro bono/public service requirement that requires all students to perform at least 60 hours of uncompensated public service work.

The Maurice A. Deane School of Law—Hofstra University offers students opportunities to engage in pro bono service on a not-for-credit basis. The Public Service Certificate Program provides students the opportunity to volunteer with nonprofit organizations, governmental agencies and private law firms, or practitioners doing pro bono work. Students who participate receive a certificate from Hofstra Law recognizing their public service. The student-run Unemployment Action Center is a nonprofit corporation that offers free advice and representation to persons denied unemployment benefits.

The Pro Bono Project at Indiana University School of Law—Bloomington is a cooperative program between the Law School and the bar and bench of the surrounding area to provide civil legal assistance to people who could not otherwise afford it. Students are assigned to work closely with volunteer lawyer on a wide variety of matters.

The University of Idaho College of Law is committed to providing opportunities for law students that emphasize the value and habit of service to the community. Accordingly, all students are required to perform 40 hours of uncompensated law-related pro bono service as a condition of graduation. The purpose of this pro bono requirement is to instill in students a commitment to their responsibility as lawyers to give back to the community and promote justice by assisting the underserved and underrepresented. As a result of the program, students gain practical legal experience, clients are served, and legal service providers gain valuable assistance. Students are given the opportunity to fulfill their public service requirements in a wide range of settings, including legal service organizations, government agencies, private firms (pro bono cases), non-profits, and legislative offices.

Indiana University School of Law—Indianapolis encourages pro bono's involvement through a variety of placement opportunities ranging from community based agencies to governmental entities.

Loyola Law School—Los Angeles mandates 40 hours public service work beginning entering class of Fall 94 and thereafter.

The University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law has a pro bono/public service requirement. After completion of their first year and before their final semester of law school, students must perform a minimum of 30 hours of uncompensated public service work. Institutional support is provided in the form of a half-time director and a half-time assistant who help students in meeting this requirement by having over 300 locations identified as well as assisting students in establishing other locations according to their individual interest.

University of Maine School of Law's faculty has adopted a voluntary student pro bono legal service standard under which every student is encouraged to provide a minimum of 80 hours of pro bono legal service prior to the time of graduation.

"Pro bono legal service" is defined as work involving the provision of legal services that is performed without either financial compensation or academic credit.

Examples include such work for legal services providers, individual lawyers providing pro bono service, social service agencies, low income organizations, civil rights organizations, environmental organizations, consumer organizations, and governmental agencies providing service to individual members of the public who are disadvantaged. Partisan political activity is not included in the definition of "pro bono legal services." Students achieving 80 hours are recognized at graduation.

University of Maryland requires full-time day students to complete a public service requirement by taking one of a number of credit bearing courses in which students have substantial responsibility for providing legal assistance to poor persons or organizations representing the interest of poor persons. These courses:

- a) provide students with an experience (including direct professional contact with poor persons) on how the law operates in practice; and
- b) include regular classes in which the faculty member provides instruction that, when integrated with the practice experience, will help the students to understand, apply and critique theory and practice; and
- c) have a professional responsibility component.

University of Memphis Law School is committed to instill within its students the very heart of the legal profession — providing equal justice under the law. Because equal justice comes at a cost, lawyers have a unique and rewarding obligation to provide pro bono services to those unable to pay. Memphis Law's Pro Bono Program is designed to nurture this ethical obligation and provide students with the opportunity to gain a practical, hands-on experience while helping improve the lives of the under-represented. Students entering in the fall of 2012 and thereafter are required to complete 40 hours of supervised pro bono work in order to graduate.

University of Michigan Law School asks students to voluntarily commit to performing 50 hours of pro bono service while enrolled at Michigan Law, allowing students to connect their developing knowledge to the world outside the Law School and gaining valuable legal skills while helping an organization in our community meet the needs of underrepresented individuals. Students may choose from Law School-organized projects (ranging from those that provide legal assistance to local residents to projects that spotlight events across the nation and around the globe), or may organize their own projects. Graduating students performing at least 50 hours of pro bono work will receive a Certificate of Pro Bono Service from the Dean, recognition at an annual pro bono banquet, and acknowledgment during the Honors Convocation.

University of Nebraska seeks to encourage and recognize volunteer legal service by second and third year students through the Pro Bono Initiative. Students completing 40 hours or more of approved, qualified pro bono work during their second and/or third years will receive a Dean's certificate upon graduation.

University of Nevada, Las Vegas—William S. Boyd School of Law requires first-year students to participate in a community service program in which teams of students, working with Legal Aid Center of Southern Nevada prepare and conduct weekly workshops for unrepresented people on basic procedures in family or small claims court and on basic landlord/tenant law and bankruptcy law.

University of North Carolina: The Pro Bono Program tracks the number of hours completed by each law student in order to recognize outstanding pro bono service. Students completing fifty or more hours of pro bono service receive a letter from the Director of the Pro Bono Program and the Dean of the law school acknowledging the contribution they have made to our community. Those who do more than seventy-five hours of pro bono service while a law student are recognized by the North Carolina Bar Association at the public service reception held at the end of each school year in the law school Rotunda. Furthermore, students who complete one hundred or more hours of pro bono service are individually acknowledged at law school graduation. Students completing 50 or more hours during their law school career will receive special notations on their official transcripts. .

Northeastern University School of Law At Northeastern University School of Law, we fuse theory and practice with ethical and social justice ideals so students understand what lawyers do, how they should do it, and the difference they can make in the lives of others. Therefore, all students must fulfill a public interest graduation requirement. Under this rule, public interest is defined as employment or service with a government agency; a legal aid, legal services, public defender, victim advocate or similar agency; an organization or attorney advocating law reform or performing pro bono legal representation; or any placement where the dominant characteristic is service to underrepresented groups. Judicial internships are not included in this definition and private firms operated for profit are only included under the 30 hour pro bono option. The requirement may be fulfilled in any of the following ways: completion of a public interest clinical course; completion of a public interest coop; 30 hours of uncompensated legal work in a public interest setting or a public interest pro bono project with a private firm during the second semester of the first year, second and/or third year of law school; or completion of an independent study project of at least 3 credit hours.

Northwestern University. We expect all students to complete at least 40 hours of community service work during their J.D. degrees.

The Nova Southeastern University Law Center Pro Bono Honor Program recognizes students who work pro bono for the public interest while enrolled in law school. Students completing a certain number of service hours will be awarded this graduation honor. The program is part of the Public Interest Law Center, which provides information and resources to students interested in working for the public interest and acknowledges that work. All students maintaining a minimum 2.0 GPA are eligible.

The University of Pennsylvania Law School requires all students entering the J.D. Program to perform 70 hours of unpaid public service work over the course of their J.D. Program through the Toll Public Interest Center.

Roger Williams University School of Law—requires all students to complete 50 hours of law-related public service over the course of their J.D. Program.

Rutgers University School of Law—Newark: The Pro Bono Program places students in a wide variety of public interest or public service law offices where students perform a minimum of 35 hours of service. The program is voluntary. Actually, more than 100 students (about 15% of the student body) participate.

Saint Louis University School of Law does not have a pro bono or public service requirement, however, students are strongly encouraged to participate in pro bono legal service prior to graduation. Pro bono work may be on behalf of a government agency, a non-profit organization or indigent individuals.

University of St. Thomas School of Law (MN): As a requirement for graduation, all students must complete fifty hours of public service during their three years of law school.

St. Thomas University will mandate law students to complete 40 hours of pro bono work as a requirement for graduation. It is designed to give second and third year students legal experience under the supervision of lawyers in a variety of non-profit offices, government agencies, and law firms. This requirement will be effective beginning with the academic year 2000–2001.

Santa Clara University: Students seeking to earn the Public Interest Law Certificate must complete 50 hours of community volunteer work promoting public interest and social justice.

University of South Carolina: Through the University of South Carolina's Pro Bono Program, students provide volunteer legal services to a variety of projects and areas of interests. Participation is not required, but strongly encouraged and opportunities for service are readily available.

South Texas College of Law: The College's Pro Bono Honors Program seeks to encourage professionalism both by providing pro bono public service opportunities for students and by recognizing this service through a formal certificate program. Students enrolled in this voluntary certificate program may perform their pro bono work at a pre-approved placement or seek approval for an alternative placement from the program director.

Southern Methodist University requires all students entering the J.D. Program in the Fall of 1993 or thereafter to complete 30 hours of work in approved law-related public service placements.

Stetson University College of Law: As a requirement for graduation, each student must complete 60 hours of public service.

Syracuse University College of Law Recognition for Pro Bono and Community Service: In recognition of the commitment to pro bono and community service work by students of the Syracuse University College of Law, the following recognition program has been created. Students who are in good academic standing and have completed at least 30 hours of pro bono and community service will receive special recognition at graduation. There are two categories of Pro Bono and Community Service Recognition Awards.

Blue Pro Bono Community Service Award: (complete the recommended 30 hours of service) Orange Pro Bono and Community Service Award: (exceed the recommended 30 hours of service by at least 1 full our)

In addition, the top three graduating students providing the most pro bono and community service hours shall be individually recognized.

Texas Wesleyan School of Law: Each student must perform no less than thirty hours of pro bono work through a placement that has been pre-approved by the School of Law. The pro bono work may be commenced following the completion of the first year of law school, and must be completed prior to graduation. The student is responsible for selecting a placement, contacting that office, arranging to do the work, completing the work, and filling out all proper forms. The work must be law related; clerical work is appropriate only to the extent needed to carry out the overall legal task. The work must be uncompensated; students may not receive monetary compensation, academic credit, or other tangible benefits for performing the service. The work must be supervised by an attorney.

Touro Law Center: As a condition of graduation, every student must satisfy the Public Interest Law Perspective Requirement by successful completion of certain clinical programs or classroom courses or by certification of 40 hours of pro bono work.

Tulane Law School was the first in the country to institute a mandatory pro bono or a community service program. Since 1987, Tulane has required each graduating student to have performed 20 hours of supervised, uncompensated legal work for clients who could not otherwise afford assistance. In 2006 requirement was increased to 30 hours.

Valparaiso University School of Law adopted a pro bono requirement in 1988. Valparaiso law students must perform 40 hours of pro bono work supervised by an attorney. Students must complete the work after completion of 30 credit hours and prior to graduation. If 60 hours or more are completed, it will be noted on the student's transcript.

University of Washington requires each student to complete 60 hours of public service legal work.

Willamette University College of Law: Willamette's voluntary pro bono Honors Program enables student to enhance their learning experience by participating in community-based legal service projects. Students gain valuable hands-on involvement in the community by volunteering with a government agency or with a public interest or nonprofit organization. All Willamette law students are eligible to participate and receive pro bono Honors credit.

Western State University College of Law has a voluntary Public Service Program in which students use their legal skills to perform law-related work for the community and the underprivileged and are recognized for that work upon completing 40 hrs. of service.

William Mitchell College of Law: Provides a wide variety of volunteer options through the Minnesota Justice Foundations. Students who serve 50 or more hours through MJF or clinics receive a transcript certification.

Widener University School of Law: Provides a special recognition at graduation for law students who perform a minimum of 60 hours of pro bono work over the course of their J.D. career.

Washburn University School of Law: Some Washburn University School of Law Certificate programs include a public service component.

LAW SCHOOL PUBLICATIONS OPEN TO STUDENT PARTICIPATION

This section of the Book of Law School Lists contains a summary of specialized law school publications open for student participation.

In addition to the scholarly specialized publications listed in the next few pages, many law schools publish newspapers, newsletters and yearbooks. In most cases these are entirely student run.

Further information about these publications can be obtained by examining the individual school's website and/or the school's most recent bulletin or by consulting the ABA · LSAC Official Guide to ABA-Approved Law Schools. Where designated by an asterisk (*), the information came from the Official Guide rather than a response to the Wilson/Stern survey.

3. Angela D. Dales Merit Scholarship Program for first-year students:

- Merit Scholarships are awarded in the form of a credit against the tuition charged to the student who receives the award.
- Eligibility for an award during the student's first year of Law School is determined based on the student's Law School Admissions Test (LSAT) score and undergraduate grade point average (UGPA) as determined by LSAC. Eligibility for retention of an award during the student's second and third years is determined based on the student's academic performance during Law School.
- The Law School is able to award only a limited number of these scholarships, and scholarships will be awarded on a first-come, first-served basis. Applicants therefore are encouraged to complete their Law School application at the earliest possible date. An award is not finalized until the applicant has been accepted to the Law School and has paid his or her seat deposit.
- Transfer students are not eligible for Merit Scholarships.

Temple University Beasley School of Law

1. Non-need Based Scholarships for Entering Students:

Temple awards a number of scholarships based on merit, need and a combination of both, so it is difficult to separate the factors which go into the selection process and to provide specific information on the number of awards made in a specific academic year.

Incoming students are eligible for a number of merit and need scholarships ranging from partial to full-time tuition. The faculty Admissions Committee makes recommendations for merit scholarship awards and students are not required to submit a separate application. The one exception is the Rubin-Public Interest Scholars Program which provides full and half tuition scholarships to students who will be pursuing a public interest legal career.

Using division students are considered for numerous scholarships based on a variety of factors including academic performance, financial need and contributions to the law community.

Temple University Beasley School of Law

1. Need Based Scholarships (other than government funds)

Temple awards a number of scholarships based on merit, need and a combination of both, so its difficult to separate the factors which go into the selection process and to provide specific information on the number of rewards made in a specific academic year.

Incoming students are eligible for a number of merit and need scholarships ranging from partial to full-time tuition. The faculty Admissions Committee makes recommendations for merit scholarship awards and student are not required to submit a separate application. The one exception is the Rubin-Public Interest Scholars Program which provides full and half tuition scholarships to student who will be pursuing a public interest legal career.

Upper division students are considered for numerous scholarships based on a variety of factors including academic performance, financial need and contributions to the law school community.

Need based scholarship are warded to students who demonstrate significant financial need as determined by the Law School Financial Aid Office based on the information they supply on the Free Application for Federal Student Aid.

B. SCHOOLS OFFERING A SUMMER CONDITIONAL ADMISSION PROGRAM

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

Appalachian School of Law

The Pre-Admission Summer Opportunity (PASO) program is for students who may have the potential to succeed as law students and lawyers, but whose skills and talents may not be reflected fully by the traditional measures of the LSAT and undergraduate performance. PASO is a program that provides participants an opportunity to experience law school course work and an opportunity for the faculty to evaluate the students' performance to assess the ability to succeed in law school. PASO participants who successfully complete the program may be offered admission to the entering class in August of the year in which they complete the program or in the following year's entering class, depending upon availability factors.

University of Baltimore

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take one class that interweaves substantive issues with a writing component. Students do not receive credit for the class. Between 30 and 40 students participate based on perceived likelihood of success. Students admitted generally have lower than desired LSAT scores or GPA, but have either outstanding issues in their record or are minority applicants with strong GPAs. There is no special application procedure however, the applicant may request to be placed in the program. In order to matriculate in the fall, students must have a 70 average at the end of the program. The program incurs no cost to the student. The contact person for the program is Professor John Lynch, Jlynch@ubalt.edu.

Campbell Law School

Approximately 50–75 students are given the opportunity to participate in our seven week performance-based admission program (P BAP). The students take two courses of three credit hours each. A final exam is given in each course. A student who receives a "B" in both courses is automatically admitted to the fall program. Students who do not meet this criteria, but who demonstrate potential for success in law school, will be placed on a waiting list for the fall program.

University of Detroit Mercy

An 8 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Legal Writing and Criminal Law. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 20 students generally participate. The Special Summer Program (SSP) is operated for minority, disadvantaged, or disabled applicants who do not meet the minimum standards of the entering class, but show potential for the study of law. SSP applicants must have at least one LSAT score in the 15th percentile. Question 13 of the application asks the applicant if he/she would like to be considered for the SSP. In a separate statement, applicants must describe the circumstances that qualify him/her for the SSP. In case of a disability, the applicant is requested to provide documentation. To be eligible for matriculation in the fall, students of the program must pass the substantive criminal law course, pass the legal research and writing course, and receive the unanimous evaluation of the SSP faculty. The cost of the program is $500 for tuition and $18 for parking. The contact person for the program is Kimberly Jones, Director of Recruitment, Admission and Student Affairs, joneski@udmercy.edu.

- University of the District of Columbia A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Required classes are Legal Writing, Reasoning and Analysis (class and tutorials); Torts and Criminal Law or Contracts. Students do not receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 8 to 16 students participate. Criteria for admission into the program varies, usually the LSAT and/or GPA are below the “accepted” numerical standards or the student’s writing or organizational skills may be of concern and below what is deemed acceptable. There is no special application procedure. The student must attend every class and complete every assignment and exam in order to meet the condition of his or her admission into the fall class. At the end of the program each student is provided with an evaluation of his or her performance in the program; they are also counseled about their progress and about areas in which they may need to improve. If appropriate the program director recommends that students participate in the Academic Support Program. There is no cost to the student for participating in the program. The contact person for the program is Professor Derek Alphan, Director of the Summer Mason Enhancement Program for Academic Success (MEPAS); he can be reached at dalphan@udc.edu.
- Florida Coastal School of Law The Alternative Admission Model Program for Legal Education (AAMPLE®) is a performance-based admissions program that rewards students who demonstrate the desire, commitment, and level of achievement necessary to manage the rigors of law school. Students are required to take two law school courses selected from our regular law school curriculum and modified to provide the most accurate indication of a student’s potential for law school success. Students may choose to take the courses on-campus or online. Within each course, students will take two quizzes and a final exam. Students who successfully pass each course with a 2.5 G.P.A. or higher are automatically accepted into the school’s Juris Doctor program. Florida Coastal offers the AAMPLE program twice a year- once in the summer for admission to our fall class and once in the fall for admission to our spring class. For more information, please contact Nicole Schumer, Assistant Director of Admissions, at nschumer@fcsf.edu.
- Indiana University
School of Law—Indianapolis An 8 week summer program that selected students must participate in as a condition of admission. Continuation in the fall is not conditioned on their performance in the summer program. Students are required to take one course, a Legal Methods class with an emphasis on Legal Writing, for which they will receive 2 credits. Between 25–35 students generally participate in the program. Selection for the program is based on a variety of factors, for example unparallel indicators, out of school for a number of years, English as a second language, or heavy science or math background with little writing. Applicants who wish to be considered for this program need to apply by February 1st instead of the normal deadline, March 1st. The program costs the rate of two credit hours, and typically nonresidents receive a scholarship. For more information contact the Office of Admissions.
- Louisiana State University Legal Methods course, successful completion, admission for Fall. Must have approval of Faculty Committee to enter summer program.
- University of Louisville—
Brandeis School of Law Approximately 25 applicants are given the opportunity to participate in a six-week course (Monday through Thursday evenings) designed to enhance their skills in order to improve their chances for success in law school. All who complete the work in a satisfactory (effort and performance are evaluated) manner are allowed to enter law school in the fall. Most, if not all, of the participants successfully matriculate each fall.

Loyola—New Orleans

University of Memphis

To help achieve diversity in the classroom, during the summer the University of Memphis School of Law operates the Tennessee Institute for Pre-Law (TIP) program. The TIP program is for Tennessee residents (and Border County residents) who are not admitted through the regular admissions process, but who show potential for the study of law and bring diversity to the class. Applicants who are admitted into TIP and successfully complete the summer program will be eligible for admission in the fall semester to the University of Memphis School of Law. The TIP portion of the application requests information on whether a student is a first-generation college graduate, foreign-born, or a first-generation U.S. citizen; whether a student is a graduate of a historically minority undergraduate institution; whether a student has a disability; or whether a student is or was economically disadvantaged. The required TIP supplemental statement asks the student to describe the circumstances that qualify the student for participation in the program and the way in which the student might contribute to diversity in the law school.

Michigan State University

We offer a program of approximately 20–25 students who participate in a 6-week course. Performance in the course determines whether a student is offered admission.

University of New Mexico

Yes, special attention to nonquantifiable factors in addition to LSAT and GPA. Successful completion allows students to continue into first year.

North Carolina Central University School of Law

Students selected to participate in the Performance–Based Admission Program (PBAP) spend two weeks in a classroom setting where they are given instruction in one substantive law course by experienced faculty members. Additionally, students learn basic skills: how to prepare for class; how to organize and outline course material; and how to answer legal questions. Applicants are evaluated through diagnostic testing, oral and written assignments and interviews. These evaluations determine whether the PBAP applicant will be admitted to the School of Law in the fall.

Nova Southeastern University

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Criminal Procedure and Negotiable Instruments. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Approximately 150 students participate, subject to change yearly. The admissions committee invites selected students to participate in the program. There is no special application procedure. In order for the student to matriculate into law school in the fall, the criteria is no grade below a C in either class and a GPA of 2.5. This year the program cost was $3500, this is also subject to change. The contact person for the program is Beth Hall, Assistant Dean for Admissions, hallb@nsu.law.nova.edu (954)262-6117

University of Oklahoma

The Admission/Early Arrival Program (EAP) is a summer arrival program beginning at the end of May and including in mid-July. The focus in EAP is on admitted students a first look at law school and building the confidence and skills necessary to succeed in law school. The class size is limited to approximately 20 students. Interested applicants must apply for both EAP and fall admission on the application. The committee uses a number of factors to evaluate candidates who have applied for EAP admission. One factor is a disparate GPA and LSAT score. A prospective student with a relatively low GPA but with a very competitive LSAT score may possess the ability to succeed in law school and might be an ideal applicant for EAP. In the alternative, a prospective student who does not test well on standardized exams but has demonstrated success in the classroom through a competitive GPA may also be a good fit for EAP. Finally, a prospective student who may have been out of the classroom environment for a number of years and who needs additional transition time might apply for the EAP. The program is designed to build the confidence and skills necessary to succeed in law school. The EAP students take tough courses from some of our very best professors. The program is not provisional in any way; students admitted through EAP automatically matriculate in the fall with the other first year students. EAP students simply arrive earlier than the rest of the class and earn law school credits during the summer. Prospective students interested in the EAP program should write a brief statement detailing why they should be considered for EAP. The deadline for EAP applications is March 15. For more information on EAP or application strategy please do not hesitate to email Susan Wilson, Recruitment Specialist at susanwilson@ou.edu. Susan works with applicants on an individual basis to answer questions about the law school admission process, OU Law's admission process, and law school in general.

Oklahoma City University

Two pass/fail courses.

Saint John's University

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take one class which varies from summer to summer. The class is always a first-year required course, last year it was Property, the year before it was Contracts. Students receive credit for the class, if they successfully complete the program by earning a B minus or better. Approximately 30 students participate each summer. Applicants need to request consideration for the Summer Institute no later than March 30th. Alternatively, an applicant may be invited to the program if their application is not otherwise admissible. In order to matriculate in the fall, students must earn a B minus or better in the course. The student pays only the cost of books. There is a required $750 deposit (the same as for all admits). If the student successfully completes the program this deposit is credited towards tuition, if not, the $750 is refunded to them. For more information contact either Robert M. Harrison, Assistant Dean for Admissions, harrison@stjohns.edu, or Theresa McNeerney, mcnernt1@stjohns.edu.

Saint Louis University

The Summer Institute at Saint Louis University is designed to identify students who have experienced the effects of educational disadvantage. The Institute includes a substantive first semester course and a course in legal skills. The program lasts seven weeks, beginning in late May/early June and ending in mid-July. Students who successfully complete this program are accepted into the School of Law for the Fall semester. Limited to 25 students. Tuition and books are free.

St. Mary's University

A 5 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take two classes, Logic & Writing and Analytical Skills. Between 15-20 students participate in the program. They are recommended by the Admissions Committee from the general applicant pool, and selected by the Program Director. There is no special application procedure. In order to matriculate into law school in the fall, the student must be recommended for admission by the professors conducting the summer program after completion. The cost of the program is $1500. The contact person is Professor John Teeter, jteeter@stmarytx.edu.

Seattle University School of Law

7 week required attendance in the Alternative Admission Program. All students are considered full members of the entering class and guaranteed admission in fall.

University of South Dakota

A 6 week screening program which will yield 10 admits. Between 30–50 students participate in the program. Students are required to take two classes, Agency and Personal Property. Students are selected based on a completed file that is eligible to begin law school that fall; usually the only concern is in the numbers, either a low LSAT and/or GPA. Applicants cannot apply for the program; they are invited to participate after review of the law school application and supporting material. During the final week of the program, participants take an exam in each course, anonymously. The two exam scores are averaged, and those who have a minimum grade of 70 (mid-C) on EACH exam, AND whose scores rank in the top ten of the program are offered admission. The cost of the program is $1,000 plus books, and room & board. The contact person for the program is Jean Henriques, Admissions Officer, jhenriqu@usd.edu.

Syracuse University

A 3 week, summer program called Leo Education Opportunity Program (LEO) that is not a conditional admission program, but a program that provides and opportunity for students who may not have otherwise been offered admission. Students are required to take three classes, Introduction to Law and the Legal System, Legal Writing Workshop, and Legal Skills. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Between 20–30 students usually participate in the LEO program. Recognizing that numerical indicators are not always the best predictors of success in law school—even when considered in combination with other factors—the College of Law admits a limited number of students each year through the LEO program. There is no special application procedure. Students do not need to achieve set grades during this program, but need to successfully complete the program requirements and take an exam at the end of the three weeks. Tuition costs are covered for all LEO participants during the summer program. For more information, contact either Nikki Laubenstein, Director of Admissions, aslauben@law.syr.edu, or Melanie Rodriguez, Assoc. Director of Student Life, mcrodriguez@law.syr.edu

Texas Southern University

Special attention to non-quantifiable factors in addition to LSAT and GPA. Successful completion allows students to continue into first year.

Texas Tech University

A 4 week summer conditional admission program. Required courses change from year to year. Students receive credit for the summer classes. Approximately 20-25 students participate in the program. The Admissions Committee decides which students will be considered for this program and those that will be accepted for the program. It is designed for those with lower academic indicators, but additional information in the file indicates the ability to succeed in law school. There is no special application procedure. If accepted for the summer program, they must attend the summer program to proceed to the fall. There is no required grade point average from the summer to proceed to the fall. The current tuition rate is $334 for Texas residents and $580 for non-residents. Students will pay the current tuition rate and all tuition generated fees. Since these rates change from year to year, the applicant should check the university website for current information. The contact person for the program is Terence L. Cook, Assistant Dean for Admissions and Recruitment, terence.cook@ttu.edu.

Texas Wesleyan School of Law

The Pre-Admission Legal Studies (PALS) program is a School of Law conditional admit program requiring a B- or better performance. Students are invited into the program via the admissions process.

Thomas M. Cooley Law School

The Professional Exploration Program (PEP) is a 5–8 day intensive program. This program is designed to give law school applicants who do not meet the minimum admissions requirements a chance to qualify for alternative admission. It also provides law school applicants the opportunity for self-exploration and discovery of strengths and weaknesses in their pursuit of a career. At the completion of the program, the students' performance is evaluated by the PEP Committee. Students are notified by letter, three weeks after the program, as to the committee's decision whether they've been offered admission to Thomas M. Cooley Law School.

Widener University School of Law

A 6 week summer conditional admission program. Students are required to take three classes. Students do not receive credit for the classes. Student participation varies from year to year. Criteria for admission is based on applicants who have displayed promise of success in legal studies even though they may have excelled in only one of the two principal standardized predictors of success—the Law School Admission Test and the undergraduate grade point average. The personal statement, letters of recommendation and all materials submitted in support of the application are considered. There is no special application procedure. Participants who obtain a 2.3 cumulative grade point average in the program are offered admission to the fall class. The cost of the program is $1750. The contact person for the program is Barbara Ayars, Assistant Dean for Admissions, blayars@mail.widener.edu, (302) 477-2162.

E. SCHOOLS PERMITTING PRE-SELECTION OF STUDENTS TO BE INTERVIEWED BY FIRMS

Schools listed below unless otherwise noted, permit firms interviewing on campus to pre-select 100% of the candidates they will interview. Only schools responding to the Wilson/Stern survey were included.

University of Alabama	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers pre-select candidates.
Albany Law School	On campus interviews are scheduled based on 100% employer prescreening.
American University
University of Arizona	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.
Arizona State University College of Law	May pre-select 100%.
University of Arkansas— Little Rock
Atlanta’s John Marshall Law School
Baylor University
Boston College Law School	While employers may pre-select all candidates, they are strongly encouraged to participate in an interview lottery system to ensure that all interested students have a broad range of interviewing opportunities. Over 90% of employers participate in our lottery system.
Boston University School of Law	All employers are required to allot 30% of their interview schedule to lottery candidates with exceptions for intellectual property employers or employers requiring a specific undergraduate background.
Brooklyn Law School	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. While employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of the candidates, they are strongly encouraged to reserve interview slots for students ranked below their stated criteria so that a larger number of interested students have interviewing opportunities.
University of California—Davis
California Western University
Capital University
Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)	A portion of students (approximately 15%) are selected by lottery.
Case Western Reserve University	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.
Catholic University of American	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates whom they will interview.
Charleston School of Law

Chicago—Kent Law School	No, pre-select 80% other 20% filled by lottery.
University of Cincinnati	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.
University of Colorado	Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested.
University of Connecticut	Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.
Creighton University	Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.
University of Denver
DePaul University College of Law	Permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms. Pre-select 90%; other 10% by lottery.
Drake University	Drake University does not permit firms to preselect 100% of the interview candidates unless this is the only way a firm will come. If this is the case, we allow them to do it, with notice to the students.
Duke University	Students rank the firms they are interested in interviewing with and the Office of Career and Professional Development arranges a schedule that accommodates as many of those requests as possible. Firms do not pre-select the students they interview with.
Duquesne University	Interviewed by firms. Employers are asked to select 75% of the interviews, 25% are selected through the lottery system.
Emory University
Florida Coastal School of Law	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. FCSL does permit pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms based on criteria by the employer.
Florida State University
University of Florida	Employers may pre-select candidates. Criteria include experience, extra curricular activities, grades, evidence of research and writing skills, and ties to geographic region.
George Mason University	School permitting pre-selection of students to be interviewed by firms.
Georgia State University	Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates
University of Georgia	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100%.
Gonzaga University	Employers may pre-select but are encouraged to see all interested candidates.
Hamline University School of Law	All resumes are sent to employers, although they may pre-select.
Maurice A. Deane School of Law —Hofstra University
University of Houston Law Center	All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers are permitted to pre-select 100% of candidates.

University of IdahoIndiana University School of Law—
Bloomington

Employers are encouraged to see all interested candidates, but may pre-select as they choose.

The John Marshall Law SchoolUniversity of Kansas

All students are permitted to submit for all employers. Employers preselect 90% of their candidates; 10% are selected by lottery.

University of Kentucky

Employers have the option to pre-screen resumes. However, approximately 15% of employers coming on campus choose instead to see all interested candidates.

University of Louisville—
Brandeis School of Law

Employers may pre-select 100%, but are encouraged to consider factors other than strict academic performance. Several employers try to interview all who submit resumes.

University of MaineUniversity of Maryland

We permit 100% pre-selection of students to be interviewed by employers.

University of Memphis

Permits employers to pre-select 100% of the students that the firm chooses to interview. They are encouraged to see all interested candidates.

Mercer University

Employers may pre-select 100%.

University of Miami

Fall semester: 80% pre-select, 20% by lottery. Spring semester: 80% pre-select, 20% by lottery.

H. WHAT SCHOOLS DO WITH MULTIPLE LSAT SCORES

Only those schools responding to the Wilson/Stern Survey are included.

University of Akron	If an applicant has multiple LSAT scores, we will consider the highest score.
University of Alabama	Highest score considered.
Albany Law School	Highest score considered.
American University	Admission Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.
*Appalachian School of Law	Highest of last 3 years score for admissions purposes.
University of Arizona	Most scores are averaged unless they are 10 points or more apart. If they are, we use the higher score.
Arizona State University College of Law	The highest score is used in all reporting and given more significant consideration. Admissions committee sees and reviews all scores.
University of Arkansas—Fayetteville	We take the highest of the final three scores.
Atlanta's John Marshall Law School	The Admissions Committee will see all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.
Baylor University	Highest score considered.
Boston College Law School	Adheres to the ABA policy of reporting the higher LSAT score, but considers all scores in the file review process. The admissions committee will consider addenda explaining differences in scores.
Boston University School of Law	Highest score considered.
University of Baltimore	If more than 7 points apart and GPA is 3.0 plus, take highest.
Brooklyn Law School	The Committee on Admissions sees all reported scores and give substantial weight to the highest score.
University of California—Berkeley	Take highest score.
University of California—Davis	In keeping with past practice, consideration will be given to all LSAT scores. Applicants are asked to provide additional information when there is a score difference of 5 points or higher. The highest score will be the score of record.
University of California— Hastings College of the Law	Highest score used.
University of California—Irvine	The admission committee will see all reported but will count the highest as the official score.
University of California—Los Angeles	Highest score with discretion of considering all.
California Western University	Most recent if highest, otherwise averaged.
Campbell University	We generally use the highest score; however, we do consider each individual score and any explanation offered for the lower score.
Capital University	Will consider highest score; generally, for three or more scores, the average is used. Explanations for differences welcome.
Benjamin N. Cardozo (Yeshiva)	Review all scores, may give highest consideration to high LSAT.

Case Western Reserve University	Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.
Catholic University of America	Consider highest score, but all scores are reviewed.
Chapman University School of Law	The ABA has changed the rule regarding the reporting of the highest of multiple LSAT scores, however, this does not change the review process. If the candidate has taken the LSAT multiple times, the Committee will review of the LSAT scores. From an admissions perspective, the average score may be the best indication of an applicant's success. It is advisable for the applicant to explain why one score is more indicative of his or her likelihood of success. For merit scholarship purpose, we will utilize the high LSAT SCORE.
Charleston School of Law	Highest score considered.
University of Chicago	We review all scores, however for reporting purposes we use high LSAT.
Chicago-Kent College of Law	If the LSAT is taken more than once, the Admissions Committee may consider the average score, the more recent score or the higher score, depending on individual circumstances. Preference is typically given to the highest score earned.
University of Cincinnati	Use highest score.
City University of New York (CUNY) School of Law	Consider all scores, with some weight being given to highest.
University of Colorado	Consider and review all scores, but high LSAT score is used when reporting.
Columbia University	The Committee considers the entire LSAT testing history when evaluating applications for admission.
University of Connecticut	All scores are considered however, the high LSAT score is used when reporting.
Cornell University	Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed. Explanations for differences are suggested.
Creighton University	Unless there is reason to discount one.
University of Dayton	Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.
University of Denver	Generally accept highest, although all scores are considered.
DePaul University College of Law	We will consider the high score.
University of Detroit Mercy	We review all scores.
University of the District of Columbia School of Law	Consider highest score, but all scores are reviewed.
Drake University	Consider highest score, but all scores reviewed.
Duke University	Will consider higher score or average, depending on circumstances and the overall context of the application. An addendum is suggested when there is a significant difference between test scores.
Duquesne University	First two scores not averaged.
Earle Mack School of Law, Drexel University	The highest score is used.
Emory University	The law school admission committee will consider all reportable LSAT scores. The admission committee will use the LSAT score that in their estimation best represents an applicant's academic ability.

University of Florida	Review all scores. Candidates should discuss score differences.
Florida Coastal School of Law	Florida Coastal School of Law uses the highest score.
Florida State University	Average. Consider all scores within 5 years.
Fordham University	Consider all scores, but report the high as per ABA instructions.
George Mason University	We utilize the high LSAT.
George Washington University	We use the high LSAT.
Georgetown University Law Center	For reporting purposes, Georgetown Law adheres to the ABA policy of reporting the higher LSAT score. For evaluation purposes, the Georgetown Admissions Committee typically averages LSAT scores. Georgetown may consider the higher LSAT score if you have only taken the LSAT twice. Please address any mitigating circumstances you feel the Admissions Committee should consider.
University of Georgia	Admission Committee reviews all scores, but typically considers higher score for admission purposes.

University of Iowa	We use the higher score.
The John Marshall Law School	We tend to use the highest score.
University of Kansas	Consider all scores, but give the most weight to the highest score.
University of Kentucky	Multiple scores are averaged in almost all cases.
Lewis & Clark Law School	Use the highest score, but all scores are seen.

University of Louisville—Brandeis School of Law	Emphasize the most recent score in our evaluation process. Appreciate explanations for multiple takings.
Loyola Law School—Los Angeles	The average score is used unless the applicant has submitted an explanation for the lower score.
Loyola University—Chicago	Higher of 2 scores, if highest is most recent.
University of Maine School of Law	Averages scores, significant increase noted.
University of Maryland	Use the higher score.
Marquette University	In the case of an applicant with more than one LSAT score, the Admissions Committee will receive a test score report for the applicant that discloses all LSAT scores and the average of those scores. The Admissions Committee may give the highest score priority on a case-by-case basis, especially if the applicant can provide compelling, convincing evidence in a brief written addendum explaining why a lower LSAT score should be considered aberrant.
Mercer University	All scores reviewed, highest LSAT reported to ABA.
University of Memphis	Use highest for multiple takings.
University of Miami	Highest LSAT given the greater weight.
University of Michigan	Report highest score, but consideration given to each score and to average.
Michigan State University	Only the highest is considered.
Mississippi College School of Law	Use highest score but review the range of scores.
University of Mississippi	Admissions decisions are based upon the highest LSAT score.
University of Missouri—Columbia	If two LSAT scores, the highest score is considered. If more than two LSAT scores, the scores are averaged.
University of Missouri—Kansas City	Use the higher score, although all scores are considered before making an admission decision.
University of Montana	Scores are averaged for the prediction index but all scores are taken into consideration.
University of Nebraska	Average multiple LSAT scores. Admission Committee reviews all scores.
University of Nevada—Las Vegas	Highest LSAT given the greater weight.
New England Law Boston	Use the highest score, although all scores are taken into consideration.
University of New Hampshire School of Law	Review all; report highest score.
New York Law School	The entire application is reviewed, including all LSAT scores. In the unusual circumstance of a significant difference between scores, additional weight is given to the higher score when the candidate is able to provide us with reasons for that difference.
New York University	The Committee on Admissions evaluates LSAT scores based on the average score in most cases. The Committee may take special circumstances into account. If a candidate can point out specific reasons why the Committee should consider an LSAT score aberrant, they should detail those reasons in an addendum to the personal statement.

University of North Carolina	We use the higher of two scores. With more than two scores, we decide on a case by case basis between average or highest.
North Carolina Central University	Average multiple LSAT scores.
Northern Kentucky University	Will strongly consider the highest. Explanation of multiple scores encouraged.
Northeastern University School of Law	We use the highest LSAT score.
Northern Illinois University	Average multiple scores (but the admissions committee sees the separate scores)
Northwestern University	Takes the highest.
University of Notre Dame Law School	Review all scores; consider the highest.
Nova Southeastern University	We take the highest LSAT score.
Ohio Northern University	Take highest LSAT score.
Ohio State	We average.
Oklahoma City University	We use highest LSAT only.
University of Oklahoma	Highest LSAT score
University of Oregon	Consider all scores, but we report the highest score to the ABA.
Pace University	Take the highest LSAT score.
University of the Pacific, McGeorge School of Law	Use the highest score posted within a five year period.
Penn State Dickinson School of Law	Average scores. We do, however, look at all scores and will consider special circumstances offered in explanation for a low score.
University of Pennsylvania	If you take the LSAT more than once, all scores and their average will be considered. If there are circumstances that you believe affected your performance on a prior test, we encourage you to provide an additional statement with your application explaining those circumstances. The Admissions Committee will consider such information and may, at its discretion, evaluate your application based on the higher or highest LSAT score.
University of Pittsburgh	We use the highest LSAT score.
University of Puerto Rico	Take the highest score as a general rule. However, spread of scores is considered.
Quinnipiac University	We take the highest LSAT score.
Regent University School of Law	Review all test scores, the highest score is heavily weighted.
University of Richmond	We take the highest LSAT score, but all scores are reviewed and explanations for significant differences in scores are encouraged.
Roger Williams University School of Law	We take the highest score.
Rutgers University—Newark	Average multiple scores unless 10 point difference then take higher, or if written explanation, take higher.
Samford University—Cumberland	Take highest score.

St. John's University	Take highest score.
Saint Louis University	Take highest score.
St. Mary's University	The scores are averaged.
University of St. Thomas of Law (MN)	We see all scores but consider the high score for decisions.
St. Thomas School of Law	The scores are averaged.
University of San Diego	The highest score is used but scores are reviewed.
University of San Francisco	Take the highest for admission. Use the average for awarding scholarships.
Santa Clara University	Take the highest score.
Seattle University School of Law	Take highest score, but spread of scores is considered.
Seton Hall University School of Law	All scores reviewed, highest score given greatest weight.
University of South Carolina	Averages multiple LSAT scores. A score is valid for 4 years.
University of South Dakota	All scores are reviewed, highest score given priority.
South Texas College of Law	We take into consideration the highest LSAT score.
University of Southern California	Review all test scores, though the highest score is most heavily weighted.
Southern Illinois University	Highest score only.
Southern Methodist University	We take the highest reported LSAT score.
Southwestern Law School	Southwestern takes the highest score; however, spread of multiple scores considered.
Stanford Law School	All valid LSAT scores are reviewed.
SUNY Buffalo Law School	While the Admissions Committee will see all reported scores, we place considerably more weight on the highest LSAT score.
Stetson University College of Law	Stetson takes the highest score. Extenuating circumstances are taken into consideration.
Suffolk University Law School	Take the highest score for admissions.
Syracuse University	Syracuse Law will still review all LSAT scores in the overall evaluation process. The student's HIGHEST LSAT attempt is the score that will be calculated with the cumulative GPA to determine the index number and is the score generally used to make a decision.
Temple University Beasley School of Law	Temple University Beasley School of Law will consider the high LSAT score, although all LSAT scores are reviewed and applicants should provide a written explanation if there is a significant difference between one or more LSAT scores.
University of Tennessee	The scores are averaged.
University of Texas	We review all scores but will take the highest score.
Texas Tech University	1–5 point span, we use highest; over 5 points, we use the newest score.
Texas Wesleyan School of Law	The scores are averaged.

Thomas M. Cooley	Consider only the highest score in our admission formula. Score must be within 5 years of application date.
University of Toledo	Highest score only.
Touro Law Center—Jacob D. Fuchsberg	Touro Law takes the higher/highest score (provide contextual information/addendum if there is a dramatic difference in scores).
Tulane University	Tulane looks at all scores, but relies on the applicant to explain why a higher score should be given more weight.
University of Tulsa	We average, unless compelling reasons given for not averaging or if score increases 20% points.
University of Utah	We will presumptively use the highest score. The reviewer, however, may use the average score if information in the file indicate that the score is the most appropriate measure of the candidates skills.
Valparaiso University	Highest score.
Vanderbilt Law School	Readers consider all scores and their average.
Vermont Law School	Take highest score.
Villanova University	The Admissions Committee will consider the high LSAT score, although all LSAT scores are reviewed and applicants should provide a written explanation if there is a significant difference between one or more LSAT scores.
University of Virginia	Highest score.
Wake Forest University	We average if test taken more than twice.
Washburn University School of Law	Highest score.
University of Washington	Take the average of multiple LSAT scores.
Washington and Lee University	Will consider explanation for widely disparate scores
Washington University	For admittance and scholarship purposes, students are evaluated based on their highest LSAT score. However, all scores are reviewed so vast discrepancies should be explained.
Western New England College	We take the high score.
Western State University	We will review all scores but give consideration to the highest score.
Widener University School of Law	We review all scores, however, for reporting purposes we use high LSAT.
Willamette University	Take highest score as a general rule; however, spread of scores is considered.
William & Mary	Consideration is given to individual scores and related circumstances. Reports are prepared using direction provided. (Example: Since the ABA uses the highest LSAT, accordingly so does William & Mary Law School.)
William Mitchell College of Law	Review all scores but give consideration to the highest.
University of Wisconsin	We take the highest LSAT score. If there is a significant discrepancy and a written explanation is provided, we will take all factors into consideration.
University of Wyoming	University of Wyoming takes the highest of multiple LSAT scores.
Yale Law School	Review all score information available. We do not average or take the high score

I. HOW SCHOOLS TREAT OLD LSAT SCORES

J. PREFERRED MEANS OF RECEIVING LETTERS OF RECOMMENDATION

Each law school was asked to indicate its preferred means of receiving letters of recommendation. The four options listed below were offered. The list indicates preferences of schools responding.

- (1) We accept those letters of recommendation which have been processed through the Law Services Letters of Recommendation Services.
- (2) We prefer that students use the Law Services Letter of Recommendation Services but do accept letters directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institutions' credential service.
- (3) We prefer letters which come directly from the recommender or the undergraduate institution's credential service but do accept letters from the Law Service Letter of Recommendation Service.
- (4) We have no preference.

FAQs

DIVERSITY AND DISTRIBUTION

How do you define diversity?

If yours is a state school, what % of students are in state?

In your financial aid policy, how much do you calculate for living expenses?

Do you still consider diversity in your admission process?

The University of Akron School of Law	73%	$12,454.00		We believe that race, gender, age geography, undergraduate and graduate studies, work experience, volunteerism, extracurricular activities, and personal life experiences contribute to the diversity of the student body.
Albany Law School		$18,642.00	Yes	Albany Law School's students, faculty and staff are diverse in race, age, religious beliefs, national and ethnic origins, political affiliation and sexual orientation. President & Dean Penelope Andrews exemplifies this as a woman who grew up in South Africa and has taught and researched law in numerous countries and continents. Albany Law School's multicultural initiatives include counseling services, culturally diverse programs, recruiting a diverse student body, and building the Diversity Internship and Mentor Program.
Arizona State University	75%	$20,906.00	Yes	We consider diversity of perspective that can be obtained through background and experience, looking at factors that include (but are not limited to) cultural, linguistic, economic, gender, sexual orientation, age, work experience, life experience, academic and intellectual pursuits and other factors.
Atlanta's John Marshall Law School		$15,890.00	Yes	The historic mission of Atlanta's John Marshall Law School is reflected in the fact that it had women in its first graduating class and was the first law school in Georgia to integrate. Hastings seeks each year to enroll students whose intellect, experience, creativity, and personal character will enable them successfully to complete their own legal education, contribute to the education of their classmates, and become accomplished lawyers who serve the needs of the public through the practice of law, the formulation of public policy, legal scholarship, and other professional endeavors. Because numeric criteria do not necessarily indicate whether an applicant will meet or contribute to these goals, Hastings considers a variety of non numeric criteria. These criteria include letters of recommendation, academic honors and awards, the rigor and difficulty of the applicant's undergraduate and graduate education, communications skills, work experience, public service, and significant achievement in other nonacademic activities. Hastings also considers whether the applicant is among the first in his or her family to attend college, is a member of groups that historically have been underrepresented in law school and the legal profession, or has experienced significant medical, personal, educational, or other adversity.

Northeastern University School of Law	n/a	$18,000.00	Yes	Northeastern University School of Law seeks a student body with a broad set of interests, backgrounds, life experiences, and perspectives. Our students represent various political ideologies as well as religious, cultural, and social backgrounds, including a large number of gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender students. Students of color represent approximately one-third of our total student body (32 percent of students in our most recent entering class.) The faculty is also diverse: 52 percent are women and 22 percent are people of color. Such diversity is important in a law school, which must train its graduates not only to analyze and interpret the law, but also to reflect on competing viewpoints, advance arguments persuasively in a variety of forums, and develop policies affecting a broad range of people. Historically, the School of Law's diverse student body has produced graduates who have served all segments of society and who have become leaders in many fields of law. Exposure to a wide array of ideas, outlooks, and experiences is critical to law students' educational and professional development.
University of Notre Dame Law School		$18,000.00 Room & board, books, travel supplies	Yes	Our admission review process focuses on enrolling a group of highly motivated men and women who will bring to the Law School a great variety of personal and professional experiences. While it is a nice starting point, a non-discrimination policy such as ONU's, above, does not even begin to scratch the surface of what an institution must do to be a truly diverse and accepting environment. At ONU Law not only do we make a pledge against discrimination, but we go further by actively recruiting members of racial and ethnic minority groups, the LGBTQ community, geographically diverse states, a variety of undergraduate universities, and all ages to join us. It is by our differences that we create a rich learning environment where we can learn to understand ourselves and broaden our understanding of the world.
Oklahoma City University School of Law			Yes	Yes. Diversity is defined primarily as membership in an underrepresented (at the law school or in the profession) ethnic or racial minority group.

Texas Wesleyan School of Law		$14,940.00	Yes	At Texas Wesleyan Law, diversity speaks to a student's ability to add to the student body and the legal community by showing their ability and willingness to share their diversity of voice, viewpoint, and experience with the broader law school community. Diversity considerations include and in no particular order: race, ethnicity, gender, sexual orientation, age, faith, economic, geographic, disability, and experiential.
Thomas M. Cooley Law School	30–40%	$11,160.00	No	Thomas M. Cooley upholds its founding mission of providing accessible legal education as well as its anti-discrimination policy in a way that continually produces entering classes that are diverse along many variables. Cooley is proud to acknowledge that its student body annually ranks as one of the most racially diverse in the country. Thomas M. Cooley Law School abides by the AMA Standard 210(a) which provides that a "law school shall foster and maintain equality in opportunity in legal education, including employment of faculty and staff, without discrimination or segregation on the grounds of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, or sexual orientation."
University of Toledo		$15,818.00	Yes	Applicants are invited to indicate whether they are a member of a group traditionally underrepresented in the legal profession.

MORE FAQs

Do you treat LSAT scores from special accommodations administrations differently than those from standard administrations?

Boston College Law School	The admissions committee considers each candidate individually—paying close attention to differences in circumstances and types of accommodations. Candidates receive a thorough and thoughtful review.
Boston University School of Law	Applications that include LSAT scores from special accommodation administrations receive the same careful review and attention as applications that include LSAT scores from standard administrations. In accordance with LSAC’s research report on the predictive validity of accommodated LSAT scores, however, the admissions committee may put more emphasis on the undergraduate GPA and overall strength of the application in reaching its admissions decision about an applicant with accommodated test scores.
University of California—Irvine	No.
Charleston School of Law	No.
University of Chicago	No.
Chicago-Kent	No.
University of Connecticut	We do not treat accommodated administrations differently than those from standard administrations.
Cornell University	LSAT scores obtained under accommodated conditions are evaluated on a case by case basis.
Drake University	No.
University of Georgia	No.
Loyola University—Chicago	If the reason for accommodations is included in the LSAT report we will review them carefully. If the information is not provided, consideration is given in connection to the remainder of the information in the applications.
University of Memphis	The admissions committee examines each special accommodations LSAT score individually due to differences in circumstances and types of accommodations. LSAC does not establish national norms for accommodated LSAT scores, as it does for the non-accommodated LSAT scores.
University of Michigan	No.
Northeastern University School of Law	No.
Nova Southeastern	No.

Temple University Beasley School of Law	The general rule is that if a student did not live in the state of Pennsylvania for at least one year while not in school and prior to enrolling, he/she is presumed to be a non-resident for tuition purposes. However, a student may overcome this presumption by showing that he/she came to the state for reasons other than attending law school, or by providing sufficient proof of intent to remain in the state after graduation from law school.
University of Toledo	Students are able to reapply for residency classification after one year. It is possible that students will be reclassified as Ohio residents for tuition purposes provided they meet certain definitions and/or requirements.
University of Utah	Students may apply for residency after completing 40 credits. Students earn 30 credits at the end of the first year of law school. They may then take 10 credits during the summer to apply for residency by the fall of second year.
University of Washington	No.
William & Mary	Yes, any student may apply for residency classification when they believe they qualify. Eligibility information and the domicile form is located on the web.
William S. Boyd School of Law	Yes, if student meets requirements for establishing state residency.
University of Wisconsin	No.
University of Wyoming	Yes, students can be considered for resident tuition after one year, if they have met residency requirements.

Regent University School of Law	No	No new three year programs, but we added a new Two-Year Accelerated Program—launching May 2013 Students save considerable time and living expenses while earning the same academically rigorous Regent legal education taught from a Christian worldview. Students will enter the job market one year sooner than students in a traditional 3-year program. Students study full-time for six consecutive terms by starting in late May as opposed to mid-August. After the first summer, accelerated program students are integrated into the same classes as all other law students, studying the same curriculum under the same professors as enjoyed by students in the traditional three-year program. Students will experience a law-practice externship as a part of the Accelerated Program. Due to a rigorous schedule, students will have less opportunity for extracurricular activities and summer employment. Requires at least a 152 LSAT, a 3.0 cumulative UGPA, and other indicators of high academic promise. Applications and supporting documents should be submitted via the LSAC website. Priority consideration date for the two-year program is January 15. Late applications are considered on a space-available basis. Students admitted to the program must submit an enrollment agreement and seat deposit no later than April 1. It is recommended that applicants take the October or December LSAT preceding the desired June enrollment. Applicants must submit an addendum in their application addressing their reasons for seeking enrollment in an accelerated, rigorous program of study. The admissions committee will be looking for a commitment to disciplined, intensive legal study.
