

Holding Individuals to Account for War Crimes, Genocide, and Crimes Against Humanity: Modes of Criminal Responsibility in International Law

A talk by Svetislav Rabrenović, LLB Belgrade, LLM U Michigan
Deputy Prosecutor, Serbian War Crimes Prosecutor's Office

Wednesday, April 1, 2020 | 10:40 AM - 12:40 PM
Boston University School of Law, 765 Commonwealth Avenue, Room 203

Svetislav Rabrenović represents the prosecution before the War Crime Chamber of the High Court in Belgrade. Over the course of his career, Mr. Rabrenović argued cases before the International Criminal Tribunal for the former Yugoslavia (ICTY) and the International Court of Justice. He also directed Serbia's Office for Cooperation with the ICTY and advised the Minister for Human and Minority Rights. He published and lectured extensively on legal issues related to war crimes, transitional justice processes in former Yugoslavia, and the impact of war crime trials on such processes.

Mr. Rabrenović will be introduced by Vladimir Petrovic, Senior Researcher, BU Center for the Study of Europe. John Cerone, Visiting Professor of Law, BU School of Law, will lead the discussion following the talk.
