

Yavilah McCoy, is the CEO of the Diversity consulting group DIMENSIONS Inc. Through Dimensions, Yavilah services an international portfolio of clients in the areas of Education, Philanthropy, and Social Justice. As an anti-racism educator and activist with an international platform, Yavilah provides training and consulting to numerous projects that span multiple identities and communities. Yavilah brings a uniquely intersectional perspective to the ongoing work of racial justice and collective liberation. She is a pioneer of the Jewish diversity and equity movement and an advocate and mentor for the empowerment of a transglobal community of Jewish Leaders of Color. Yavilah is a trustee of the Irving Harris Foundation and has served on the steering committees of the Women’s March and many other large-scale national movement efforts. Yavilah was an inaugural recipient of the Spielberg Foundation’s Joshua Venture Fellowship and directed the launch of the “Ruderman Synagogue Inclusion Project” for Combined Jewish Philanthropies and the Ruderman Family Foundation in Boston. Yavilah also directed the Bronfman Philanthropy’s Curriculum Initiative, where she provided educational consultancy to 600 prep schools across the nation. Yavilah is a renowned national speaker, educator, and spiritual practitioner. She is a certified coach for the Auburn Theological Seminary’s Pastoral Coach Training Program and an inaugural fellow of their Sojourner Truth Leadership Circle. Yavilah was voted one of “16 Faith Leaders to Watch” by the Center for American Progress in Washington, DC and is a recipient of the Rabbi Marshall T. Meyer Risk Taker Award. In 2019 Yavilah was inducted into the “Brooklyn Jewish Hall of Fame.” In celebration of the musical traditions passed down to her from three generations of her African-American Jewish family, Yavilah is also the writer, producer and performer of the Jewish Gospel theatrical production “The Colors of Water.”